JOHANNESBURG'S "NEW SOUTH"

LECTURE BY

NOËLEEN MURRAY

Carleton College
 Sayles-Hill 251
 Tuesday, November 12
 4:30-5:30pm

Carleton welcome's Noëleen Murray – professor of architecture and urbanism and director of the Wits City Institute at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Murray's work examines architecture under and after apartheid in relation to notions of architectural modernism and apartheid modernity. She considers spaces as diverse as the migrant labour compound, the suburban shopping center, housing developments and the shaping of the university and city relationships. Her lecture interrogates the notion of the global south with in relation to Africa's metropolis, Johannesburg.
