

Through generous philanthropic donations, the University of Warwick's newly created Institute for Global Pandemic Planning is offering scholarships for 30 new doctoral students for October 2021 entry across:

Mathematical Epidemiology
Public Health
Behavioral Science

The program will include participation in relevant postgraduate taught courses and development or refining of a research project, followed by full time research to complete that project. Each student will have supervision from academics in at least two of the main disciplines of the center and across two university departments, with at least one supervisor from one of Warwick Medical School, Warwick Business School, or the Department of Mathematics. Students will share research space to support the cohort in learning together as well as benefitting from their main departmental affiliation. Students will be able choose among suggested projects or propose their own research projects to potential supervisors. During the first year students will be encouraged to follow postgraduate taught courses in the host departments to increase their skills and knowledge relevant to their PhD as well as commencing research. Examples of potential projects and supervisors are given below. There are also profiles of the work and careers of current and past students of supervisors now affiliated with the IGPP.

Number of scholarships available: 30

Level of funding:

Full tuition fees + stipend (stipend currently £15,285 per year) for 4 years

Research and training support grant of £5,000

The Wellcome-Warwick Quantitative Biomedicine Program will additionally support lab costs of up to £10,000 for students involved in lab work.

Nationality eligibility: both UK and international

Application deadline: not specified, sorry! (So it's recommend to apply as soon as possible!)

Recommended qualifications: not specified, sorry! (So it's recommended to view example projects and potential supervisors)

Further information is available via:

Institute for Global Pandemic Planning homepage

Scholarship Application Form

PhD Student Recruitment to the IGPP (includes details on levels of funding)

Example Potential Supervisors

Example Projects

The Work of Past and Current Research Students of Supervisors in the IGPP

Meet the IGPP Team

Press Release on IGPP Scholarships